TWO KILLED IN CRASH OF

ST. CHARLES

James W. Melton and Irving J. Koenig, 21-Year-Old Novice Pilots, Were Co-Owners of Craft 'Grounded' as Unsafe.

Machine Apparently Went Into Spin Near Railroad Station at Orchard Farm, After Leaving Lambert Field.

Two flyers from Lambert-St. Louis Field were killed at 8 a.m. today in a crash at Orchard Farm, nine miles north of St. Charles, in an unlicensed airplane which Manager Gister of the municipal airport had ordered grounded yesterday as 'grounded' as unsafe.

The victims of the crash: James W. Melton, 21 years old, 236 South Central avenue, Clayton, pilot of the plane.

Irving J. Koenig, 21, 4220 John Avenue, a machinist employed at the Curtiss airplane factory.

The crash occurred as the plane approached a smooth stable field for a landing not far from the Burlington station where Jack Allen, the 20-year-old 4918 Eddy Avenue, was watching the craft, thinking his friend, Koenig, was dropping in at Orchard Farm to visit him, as he often had promised to do.

"I was watching them as they came down toward the field," Allen said to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "When they were about 100 feet from the ground the plane seemed to slow up and then fall off in a kind of a spin. I did not see it crash because a field of tall corn was in the way."

Koenig was dead when taken from the wreckage of the front seat. Melton, in the rear seat, was unconscious when found on the way to St. Joseph's Hospital at St. Charles. Both victims of the crash were licensed private pilots. The plane was owned by Koenig and Ernest Muse, employee of a grocery at 1804 Cass Avenue.

Lambert Field pilots who visited the scene of the crash expressed the opinion that the plane fell off into a spin after the pilot allowed it to lose flying speed while approaching the field for a landing. In the crash the plane was demolished.

Friedrich Gittern said he had ordered Koenig and Muse not to fly the plane from Lambert-St. Louis Field because it was regarded by pilots generally as not airworthy and dangerous to handle because of its tendency to flat-spinning. Because of its characteristics the plane had been refused a Department of Commerce license and simply bore an identification number.

Man had been flying about three hours, but still lacked the 200 hours' flying time necessary for a transport license. He was graduated from Clayton High School in 1929, and resided with his brother, Walter A. Melton Jr.

Koenig was the son of George Koenig, a broom factory superintendent, and resided with his parents and sister, Dolly, at 4220 John Avenue. For the past month he had been employed as a mechanic at the night shift at the Curtiss airplane factory at the municipal airport. He finished his work at 4:30 a.m. today and took off from the field more than three hours later to go to Orchard Farm.

ROOSEVELT AGAIN STAYS AWAY

Cancels All Engagements for Day, Including Luncheon With Ethiopia Envoy.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—President Roosevelt stayed away from his office one hour today at the suggestion of his physician, in order fully to recover from the indisposition that began Monday.

He was ready to return to his desk, but Dr. Ross T. McIntire, of the Naval Hospital, suggested another day of relaxation.

Marvin H. McIntyre, a secretary to the President, said Mr. Roosevelt had a slight cold, but had no temperature. All engagements for the day were canceled, including a luncheon to Rawlins D. Jones, law-in-law of the Emperor of Ethiopia, here on a special mission.

McIntyre said the President would return to his desk tomorrow and would keep his luncheon engagement then with Gen. Balbo of the Italian flyers.

The luncheon with the Envoy of Ethiopia was postponed until Friday.

MOSCOW, July 19.—Wiley Post landed at Rukhlovo, Siberia, at 2:32 p.m. today (8:32 a.m., St. Louis time), bad weather preventing him from continuing to Blagoveshchensk on his round-the-world flight.

The pair, who for 13 months have lived on a small farm near here, told deputies they planned the robbery because they could not make a living on the farm. "We were nearly starved all the time," said Mrs. Austin.

The weather was clear as the first of the twin-motored flying boats, piloted by Gen. Italo Balbo, rose from the waters of Lake Michigan and headed south and then east.

Before leaving Chicago, Gen. Balbo announced that if weather conditions were favorable he would undertake a trans-Atlantic journey more ambitious than the east-west crossing. The proposed route would be by way of Newfoundland to Ireland, and would keep the flyers over water a little less than 2,000 miles.

Post made a perfect landing at Rukhlovo. The flyer, however, was very near exhaustion. Rukhlovo is between Chita and Blagoveshchensk, 800 miles east of Irkutsk.

The young Air Minister of Italy, resplendent in his white uniform, was cheered as he left the Drake Hotel to enter an automobile. He saluted the crowd. He had spent an hour before breakfast scanning maps of the route. At the pier Gen. Balbo entered a rowboat and himself piloted the oars to his flagship.

Charged of embezzlement also are pending against Delmer Doherty, a former cashier. G. W. Krone, the president, is charged with conspiracy in connection with embezzlement.

Hutchins was on trial on a charge of embezzling $12,000, which is one of five allegations contained in indictments returned here in March.

ELECTRICAL CODE IS PRESENTED AS JOB RESTORER

That Year's Output.

Shipbuilders to Use More

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 19.—Electrical manufacturers today told the recovery administration that application of their proposed code of fair competition would restore the full 1929 employment level upon a return of only 60 per cent of that year's production.

Clarence L. Collens, president of the Reliance Electrical Engineering Co. of Cleveland, gave these figures in testimony before William H. Allen, deputy administrator, on the recommended code for a 35 cents an hour minimum wage and a 36-hour week.

Collens declared the industry's volume the first half of this year was 26 per cent of the 1929 record, but that employment had been spread so that about 50 per cent of the 1929 workers were given employment.

"The June business was about 40 per cent of the 1929 level," Collens said. "Since President Roosevelt's administration the improvement of employment in our industry has been about 20 per cent."

Would Preserve Identity.

Representatives of several special groups, including the vacuum cleaner manufacturers, asked to have their own codes or segregated subdivisions. The vacuum cleaner industry wanted to preserve its identity.

C. D. Jackson, general counsel of the American Gas Association, for Servel, Inc., which manufactures both gas and electric refrigerators, said that sections of the business manufacturing electrical refrigerators was ready to conform to the electrical code, but the gas refrigerator side planned to join in a code of the gas appliance industry.

Fee of Monopoly Vetoed.

The code was assented by an independent three-man committee. All director of Electrical Association President J. S. Tritie to prepare an answer explaining the proposed method of operations. Allen assured the assembled industry that no code creating a monopoly would be approved.

W. B. Price of Jersey City, saying he spoke for independent lamp manufacturers, contended that five large companies control 80 to 85 per cent of the incandescent lamp business. "We do not think, for the lamp industry, has given up its present monopoly and these patents have expired," he continued. "But we feel supervision by the National Electrical Manufacturing Association will tend to perpetuate the monopoly of the patents."

"Has the National Electrical Manufacturing Association been treating you like orphans?" Allen asked. "Orphans have a home," said Rice. "We've been living in the doghouse."

Called "Weasel Words."

Charles D. Kabbeney, a spokesman for the electrical workers, called the code proposed by the electrical manufacturers a "legal tangent of 'weasel words'." Kabbeney, vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and his assistant, Charles B. Reed, said the minimum wage proposed of 35 cents an hour was too low and the working week of 36 and 40 hours was too long. They demanded 90 cents an hour as the minimum for the skilled electrical worker, with a discount for unskilled labor, and a 30-hour work week.

Shipbuilding Industry.

The shipbuilding industry submitted a code for the one first submitted. A major change made was that all employees engaged in designing, engineering, and other occupations preparatory to starting new work, such as the pending naval construction program, should be exempt for six months from the 40-hour week proposed for the bulk of the employees.

The minimum pay for labor was left unchanged at 35 cents an hour.

that I do not know personally. The relationship is personal and vital. I have got to take the responsibility. I must pick men that I can trust.

"It is true that the majority of my deputies are men who have been employed. The answer to that is simple. They are all men whom I have known for a long time—and most of my time has been spent in industry and in the army. Does that answer you?"

"Yes, sir," said the Communist reporter.

Some of the "100" codes.

"How many codes have been submitted?" a "regular" reporter inquired.

"About 100," the General said, "but you ought to see some of them."

"Yes, we think so, too," said a reporter.

The General rested his head for a moment on his upturned hand and finally replied:

"Well, all right." But he didn't say when.

As an afterthought, Johnson said: "I would like to ask you fellows to do one thing for me. I have had the pleasure of letters and telegrams from people who think I am running the Public Works program. Thank God, that's not my baby. I wouldn't be able to handle a proposition like that. A lot of patronage seems to be involved. I am simply not the type to handle that."

What about the newspaper industry?" was asked. "Does it come under a code?"

"If it be possible," said Gen. Johnson, "let this cup pass from me—but the remainder was drowned in laughter.

Handling the Minority.

If a code was in, and retail prices in that industry "looked unreasonably," Johnson said he would certainly ask the industry about them.

"But what can you do about the minority of an industry which refuses to conform to a code?"

"You shodid know by now that no industry which fails to conform will receive the benefits of this code."

"General, just what does that mean?"

"It means," Johnson said, "that those industries have forfeited their immunity under the anti-trust laws, and are subject to prosecution. That seems perfectly plain."

"How about the steel code, which would re-establish Pittsburgh plus, make the Government sponsor of the 'company union' system, and prevent the introduction of new machinery?" a reporter asked.

Johnson studied a moment, and then said:

"That will go into any code that qualifies the remaining of the national recovery act."

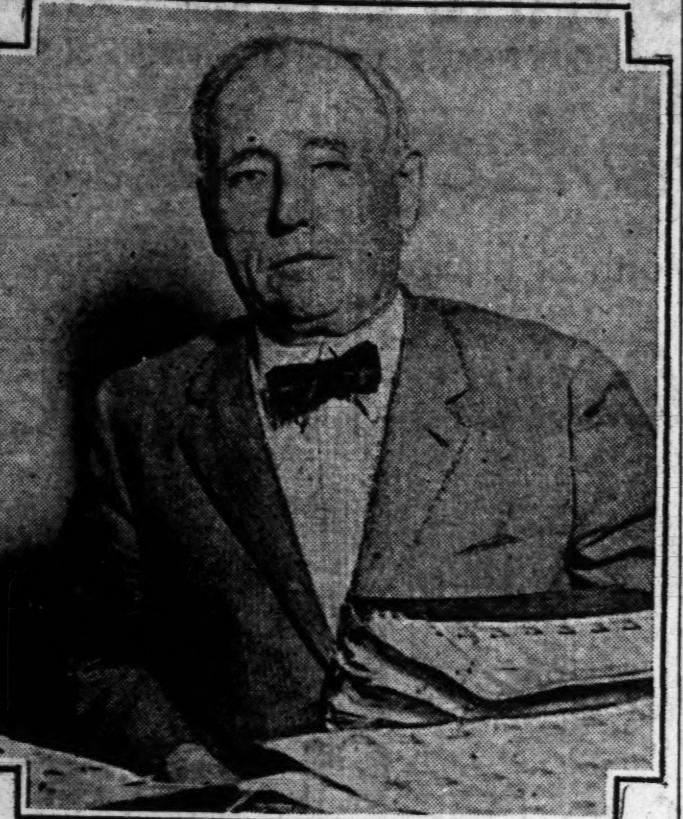

The act provides that the employees of any industry shall bargain with their employers through representatives of their own choosing.

4 JURORS CHOSEN IN MURDER TRIAL OF YOUNG MINERS

Veteran City Official Dead

Doubt Whether Eight More Will Be Selected from 45 on Panel at Jonesboro, Ill.

OPPONENTS OF DEATH PENALTY EXCUSED

Six Attorneys Are Defending Alleged Slayers of 14-Year-Old Du Quoin School Girl.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JONESBORO, Ill., July 19.—With a third of the panel chosen, selection of a jury continued today for the trial of five youthful Du Quoin miners for the murder there of LaVerne Miller, 14-year-old daughter of a United Mine Worker.

When court adjourned yesterday the State and defense each had exhausted 14 peremptory challenges in agreeing upon four jurors. Ten of 50 men questioned were excused for cause; most of them because they expressed scruples against infliction of the death penalty or conceded that they entered bias. Each side had 86 challenges left as court convened today.

Jurors selected yesterday, all heads of families, were: H. L. Baggett, 57-year-old retired business man; R. M. Kelley, 38, of Dongola; a farmer; H. G. Cruse, 38, of Anna, a farmer, and Sam Russell, 47, Anna, carpenter.

It was determined whether the eight remaining jurors would be selected from about 45 men reported for duty today.

Selection of the four yesterday came during the last hour of the court session after a day spent in exhaustive questioning by attorneys of both sides.

Six Defense Attorneys.

The defense staff of five was increased yesterday by R. Wallace Karaker of Anna, a member of the State Senate and a former Prosecuting Attorney of Union County.

Questions asked prospective jurors by the prosecution today continued to insure that no prejudice existed because certain of the State's staff were from other communities. The State was zealous also to establish whether the jurors might be affected by the youth of the defendants, two of whom are minors.

Defense interrogations sought to learn whether the jurors would be prejudiced because three of the defendants, Sam F. Barney, Barney Boston to all, and Pasquale of Italian descent, the other two are Emery Alberts and Robert Shingleton.

Defense Attorneys' Questions.

Defense attorneys were careful also to stress the point of the presumption of innocence in behalf of their clients. Reiterating to the prospective jurors that they should consider the defendants innocent until proven guilty and that the judgments returned against them do not convey proof of guilt.

As has been told, the school girl was killed the night of April 6, last, by bullets fired from a passing car which erroneously missed her father and mother, who passed near several other children seated near her as she prepared lessons she never had time to recite. Her father, Vernon Miller, had returned from duty as a special Deputy Sheriff, policing Progressive Miners' picket line, a few hours before the shooting.

Wife Arranged Burial.

Mrs. Herr, who went to the morgue after a friend had read of the finding of the body and identified it as Herr, was so certain that she arranged with an undertaker company for burial.

With Smith and Williams, he had seen Herr, in fact given him a dime to get a cup of coffee. William said that he and a group of men later were loafing near the Carr Street Police Station when Joseph came by and the crowd taunted him, "Here comes the man from the morgue." How does it feel to be dead, Joe?"

Both Smith and William Herr had seen the body at the morgue. The brother said that he couldn't be positive, although the dead man "looked like Joe." Smith, who had heard about the body while waiting for a cup of coffee at Father Dempsey's kitchen, said he was certain the body was not that of Joseph Herr, whom he had known for 25 years. For one thing, he pointed out, Herr, who had been an amateur baseball player, had big hands and feet. The body had small hands and feet.

Work on Memorial Plaza NOT TO COST CITY ANYTHING

Men Paid From Relief Fund.

Work of shaping up the Memorial Plaza bounded by Pine and Chestnut Streets and Fifteenth Street began today and will be carried on without cost to the city.

The force of about 30 workers is being paid out of work relief funds, a steam shovel is being furnished free by a grading contractor and clean clay, with which the block will be covered to a depth of three feet, is being hauled without cost than by an excavating contractor from the basement for the new Federal Building at Twelfth and Locust streets. Solid material from the buildings formerly occupied was used in raising the level of Chestnut street on the Plaza and foundations are being wrecked and pushed into the former basements.

Work of leveling the block between Twelfth and Thirteenth, Chestnut and Market streets will begin about Aug. 15, according to W. W. Horner, chief engineer in charge of streets and sewer construction.

MONEY SHORTAGE IN CANTON

CANTON, China, July 19.—This city is facing a serious monetary situation with many causes, chief among them being a decline in the annual silk export from 70 million to 4 million Canton dollars (about $21,000,000) to $8,200,000.

Remittances from Chinese emigrants abroad, an important economic factor to the city, have declined 70 per cent. Grave increase in living costs for the Canton masses is following a bad slump in copper cents, which are selling by weight at about three Canton dollars to the thousand. Silver is being heavily discounted against Hong Kong notes which command a 50 per cent premium.

Fatal Hurt in Freight Wreck.

MOORESVILLE, Ill., July 19.—Paris Kenneth Clark, 28 years old, of Bessemer, Ala., died here last night of injuries suffered in a freight wreck on the Illinois Central railroad late yesterday at Bellerville, 10 miles east of Mount Vernon. Nine cars were derailed when a car jumped the track. He had served in the marines.

'10 COMMANDMENTS OF NEW DEAL' GIVEN

State Department Aid Puts "Thou Shall Not Live Beyond Means" First.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 19.—The Ten Commandments of the New Deal were recited today by Harry F. Poyer, Assistant Secretary of State, before the University Club. They are:
1. Thou shalt not live beyond thy means.
2. Thou shalt not lose confidence in thyself.
3. Thou shalt not make Mammon thy God, but neither shalt thou be unmindful of thy monetary system lest it destroy thee.
4. Thou shalt not forget that when thy price level is achieved, the next layer on the road to prosperity is stabilization.
5. Thou shalt not make gold thy God, but thy servant.
6. Thou shalt not permit the unemployment of the people well beloved.
7. Thou shalt not fail to manage well and rationalize thy industry and stimulate and encourage it.

8. Thou shalt not suffer the paradox of poverty amid plenty.
9. Thou shalt not indulge the fancy of neglecting thy own domestic economy; but neither does this signify that thou shalt isolate thyself like a hermit.
10. Thou shalt not over-simplify nor complicate thy problems.

MAN JAILED FOR CONTEMPT FREED UNTIL SEPT. 26

J. J. McBride Gets Stay; Failed to Obey Order for Accounting.

John J. McBride, 4421 Laclede avenue, in city jail since July 3 for contempt of court for failing to pay to the heirs of his friend, John Coll, was released today under a stay of execution until Sept. 18.

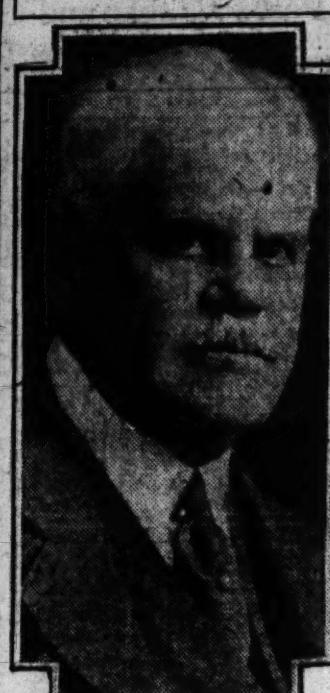

U. S. Circuit Judge Galvin, for failure to make an accounting, Coll died in 1925 after placing $5553 in a joint account with McBride, instructing him to divide it equally among himself and four heirs after Coll's death.

Answering the suit of the other heirs for an accounting, McBride admitted that a balance of $725 remained undistributed, but said it was tied up in a real estate bond for which there was no title.

McBride was sent to jail July 3 after the St. Louis Court of Appeals dismissed his application for a writ of habeas corpus.

RETIRED BROKER DEAD

HARRY F. KNIGHT DIES IN DENVER OF HEART ATTACK

Former Stock Broker Here Had Been Resting on Ranch in Colorado—69 Years Old.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Colo., July 19.—Harry French Knight of St. Louis, former stock broker and one of the financial backers of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's flight from New York to Paris, died of a heart attack in a hotel here last night.

Mr. Knight, who was 69 years old, was brought to the hotel a short time before, from his ranch at Granby, Colo., where he had become ill. He had been at the ranch for some time, resting, with a nurse in attendance.

When he arrived at the hotel, the manager was notified and attempted to telephone Dr. Paul J. Connor, who had attended the St. Louis man. When he failed to get through, the manager was calling and hurried to Mr. Knight's room to find the broker unconscious. He died a few minutes later.

Funeral Services Friday From Home of Daughter.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. Friday from the home of Mr. Knight's son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gamble, 5327 Waterman avenue.

Also surviving are three sons, Harry Hall Knight, 320 Union boulevard, also a Lindbergh backer; James Brooks Knight of New Haven, Conn., and Oliver Dudley Knight of Pasadena, Calif.

After the nonstop Atlantic flight in May, 1927, Mr. Knight entertained Col. Lindbergh at his home on the Warson road, one of the show places of St. Louis County.

Built $750,000 Home.

The Warson road house, with more than 30 rooms, was constructed in 1924, two years after Mr. Knight married Mrs. Lora J. Moore, widow of James Hobart Moore, Chicago multimillionaire. It cost between $750,000 and $1,000,000 and was built of imported brick and stone, in a landscaped area of 19 acres, two miles south of Clayton road.

It was sold in May, 1928, to Mark C. Steinberg, whose brokerage house now is in bankruptcy, for less than $500,000. The sale took place less than a year after Mrs. Knight obtained a divorce in Reno, Nev., charging extreme cruelty.

Mr. Knight's first wife died a number of years ago and for some time prior to his second marriage, he lived at the St. Louis Club. After selling the Warson road home, Mr. Knight built another place in St. Louis Country Club grounds at a reported cost of $125,000. This has since been sold.

Retired Last Year.

The brokerage firm of Knight, Dysart & Gamble was formed in 1925. Mr. Knight sold his seat on the New York Stock Exchange for $415,000 in 1930. He did not retire from business, however, until last year, when the firm was dissolved.

Mr. Knight was born in St. Louis and was educated in the public schools and at Smith Academy and Wyman Institute. He was in the dry goods business from 1881 to 1889, when he became a director of the Brown-DeMeyer Shoe Co. In 1894 he became vice-president of A. G. Edwards & Son Brokerage Co.

COURT OF APPEALS RULES AGAINST ALUMINUM CO.

Cites Judge Faris' "Clear, Crisp Language" in Piston-Casting Patent Suit.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals has affirmed the decision of Federal Judge Faris in 1931 that patents of the Aluminum Co. of America for piston-casting devices and processes were invalid. The decision was in the suit of the Aluminum Co., controlled by the Mellon interests, for an accounting and injunction against the Sterling Products Corporation, 2916 North Market street.

After stating that the opinion of the trial Judge was entitled to the "greatest respect" and reviewing Judge Faris' decision, Circuit Judge Van Valkenburgh said in the opinion handed down yesterday, "We have quoted their freely from Judge Faris because the clear, crisp language with which he points out the weaknesses of the patents in suit admits of no improvements in quality or force."

"It seems to me," Judge Van Valkenburgh concluded, "that what the patentees, acting under the tutelage of this industrial appellant, have done is so to complicate and confuse the elements of their alleged inventions by the prolixity of specifications and claims as to lay the foundation for a monopoly in aluminum pistons for internal combustion engines by whomsoever and whatsoever process produced."

Judges Booth and Stone concurred.

Humane Society Meeting.
Proposed to continue operation of the Humane Society of Missouri on a reduced budget will be discussed tomorrow afternoon at a meeting of directors of the society at the Statler Hotel. Solicitation for $20,000 to continue the more important services of the society has not been successful thus far, but will be continued, Gerald E. O'Reilly, president, announced.

State Department Aid Puts "Thou Shall Not Live Beyond Means" First.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 19.—The Ten Commandments of the New Deal were recited today by Harry F. Poyer, Assistant Secretary of State, before the University Club. They are:
1. Thou shalt not live beyond thy means.
2. Thou shalt not lose confidence in thyself.
3. Thou shalt not make Mammon thy God, but neither shalt thou be unmindful of thy monetary system lest it destroy thee.
4. Thou shalt not forget that when thy price level is achieved, the next layer on the road to prosperity is stabilization.
5. Thou shalt not make gold thy God, but thy servant.
6. Thou shalt not permit the unemployment of the people well beloved.

HARRY F. KNIGHT DIES IN DENVER OF HEART ATTACK

Former Stock Broker Here Had Been Resting on Ranch in Colorado—69 Years Old.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Colo., July 19.—Harry French Knight of St. Louis, former stock broker and one of the financial backers of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's flight from New York to Paris, died of a heart attack in a hotel here last night.

Mr. Knight, who was 69 years old, was brought to the hotel a short time before, from his ranch at Granby, Colo., where he had become ill. He had been at the ranch for some time, resting, with a nurse in attendance.

When he arrived at the hotel, the manager was notified and attempted to telephone Dr. Paul J. Connor, who had attended the St. Louis man, but failed to get through. The manager was calling and hurried to Mr. Knight's room to find the broker unconscious. He died a few minutes later.

Funeral Services Friday From Home of Daughter.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. Friday from the home of Mr. Knight's son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gamble, 5327 Waterman avenue.

Also surviving are three sons, Harry Hall Knight, 320 Union boulevard, also a Lindbergh backer; James Brooks Knight of New Haven, Conn., and Oliver Dudley Knight of Pasadena, Calif.

After the nonstop Atlantic flight in May, 1927, Mr. Knight entertained Col. Lindbergh at his home on the Warson road, one of the show places of St. Louis County.

Built $750,000 Home.

The Warson road house, with more than 30 rooms, was constructed in 1924, two years after Mr. Knight married Mrs. Lora J. Moore, widow of James Hobart Moore, Chicago multimillionaire. It cost between $750,000 and $1,000,000 and was built of imported brick and stone, in a landscaped area of 19 acres, two miles south of Clayton road.

It was sold in May, 1928, to Mark C. Steinberg, whose brokerage house now is in bankruptcy, for less than $500,000. The sale took place less than a year after Mrs. Knight obtained a divorce in Reno, Nev., charging extreme cruelty.

Mr. Knight's first wife died a number of years ago and for some time prior to his second marriage, he lived at the St. Louis Club. After selling the Warson road home, Mr. Knight built another place in St. Louis Country Club grounds at a reported cost of $125,000. This has since been sold.

Retired Last Year.

The brokerage firm of Knight, Dysart & Gamble was formed in 1925. Mr. Knight sold his seat on the New York Stock Exchange for $415,000 in 1930.

BARRIER, UPSETS

James D. Brennan, Security Salesman, Fatally Hurt in Crash Near Lambert-St. Louis Field.

James D. Brennan, 47 years old, a security salesman of 616 McPherson avenue, was killed last night, when an automobile in which he was riding overturned after striking a barrier on Lindbergh boulevard about a mile north of Lambert-St. Louis Field.

At the office of Dr. A. C. Leggat of Ferguson, Brennan was found to have suffered a broken neck. His companion, Leland A. Wind, 433 Buckingham court, a lawyer, who served as a Major in the Eighty-ninth Division overseas during the World War, was unharmed. Wind was driving the machine owned by Brennan.

The concrete paving of Lindbergh boulevard ends at the place of the accident, southbound traffic making a sharp right turn to a cinder road connecting with the other paved portion of the highway.

Brennan resided at the McPherson avenue address with his sister, Mrs. A. J. Walsh, and her husband, president of the John McMenemy Investment and Real Estate Co. Another sister, Mrs. A. C. Flagg, resides at 7118 State street, East St. Louis.

Doane said he attempted to swerve his automobile but was unable to avoid the boy, who, after being struck, ran to the sidewalk and collapsed. Death was from a fractured skull and internal injuries. The father is a laborer in the Park Department.

Billy Armstey, 7-year-old son of Mrs. Fred Armstey, 4202 Arsenal street, suffered a fractured right leg and a skull injury last night when he was struck by an automobile driven by Emil Herrscher, 4552 Morganford road, in front of 3112 Morganford. He was taken to Lutherian Hospital.

MRS. JESSIE COSTELLO,
DEFENDANT, arriving at the Court-House at Salem, Mass., with a court officer and a matron.

TESTIMONY BEGINS IN COSTELLO TRIAL

Widow Charged With Poisoning Fire Captain at Salem, Mass.

By the Associated Press

SALEM, Mass., July 19.—Testimony has begun in the trial of Mrs. Jessie B. Costello, 32 years old, attractive mother of three children, accused of murdering her husband by poison.

District Attorney Hugh A. Gregg told a jury yesterday that Mrs. Costello, while the Prosecutor delivered his excoriation of her, sat calmly, chin on hand. He referred to her children; said evidence would be presented to show she had planned to desert two of them.

She was dressed in black, relieved only by a white pleated plume of muslin which spread from her throat.

The body of Esten Mingis Jr., 14 years old, who was drowned in the Mississippi River at Cape Girardeau, Mo., was recovered yesterday near where he fell from the Government snag boat, Wright.

Mingis, 14, was helping repair the wheel of the boat when he lost his balance and fell into the water. His head struck the wheel and apparently rendered him unconscious because when a line was thrown to him he made no effort to grasp it.

A coroner's verdict of accidental drowning was returned.

Funeral services will be held Saturday from the Baumgardner undertaking establishment, Woodson, overland, to Oak Grove Cemetery.

Surviving are the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Mingis, 2338 Woodson road, Overland; two sisters and one brother.

750 SHOE WORKERS ON STRIKE DESPITE LEADERS' ADVICE

Employees Quit Willus Co.
Factory After Last of Three Pay Cuts Have Been Restored.

About 750 employees of the Millus Shoe Co., 2235 O'Fallon street, were on strike today after refusing a wage increase which restored the last of three reductions made in their pay. The cuts, successively of 12%, 15 and 20 per cent, have been made during the last two years.

The strike was called without authority of the Boot and Shoe Workers' International Joint Council, which had approved the new wage agreement. The agreement called for a 40-hour week, instead of 48 hours, and a minimum wage of $12 a week, in addition to the increase in pay.

J. C. McMorrow of Boston, representative of the international union, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and William S. Millus, vice-president and treasurer of the company, described the increase as amounting substantially to 33 1/3 per cent.

It was explained that the new agreement restored a 25 per cent cut in the piece work scale paid for a cheap type of shoe which, since last January, when the cut was made, has represented about 90 per cent of the output of the factory.

Dispute on Better Shoes.

The strikers, however, demanded also that the rate for work on a better type of shoe, which has been twice reduced by a total of 27% per cent, be increased by 12% per cent. This type of work represents the remaining 10 per cent of the company's output.

About 500 of the strikers, more than half of them young women, assembled today at the Polish-American Hall, 1938 Cass avenue, in a meeting which they had asked members of the Joint Council to attend. The Council, however, ignored the request, and when noon approached, the strikers sent out for lunch and voted to remain there until representatives of the Council arrived.

C., recently of "KLONDIKE KATE" ROCKWELL, once the toast of the Yukon, and JOHN MATSON, Alaskan gold miner. Matson fell in love with her in 1902, but was too retiring to press his suit. Fortune separated them until recently he learned she lived in Bend, Ore., and sought her out.

Speakers for them contended that the proposed 40-hour week, a reduction of 16 2/3 per cent in working time, made necessary a higher rate of pay on the better grade of shoes to enable them to earn a living wage.

Festus Factory Agreement.

They said the 25 per cent reduction in pay for work on the cheaper grade of shoe made the firm of the year for a six-month period, which expired June 30, but that the workers had continued to accept it under a tentative agreement. A condition of their acceptance of the reduction, they said, had been that the company would not proceed with plans for opening a factory at Festus, but the factory had been opened soon after the cut was made.

One of the strikers, a member of the Joint Council who disagreed with the majority of that group, said earnings of skilled workmen before the cuts were made ranged from $25 to $75, but recently have been between $20 and $35. Some young workers, he said, have earned no more than $7 a week.

Several hundred of the workers attended a meeting last night at the union headquarters in the Holland Building, at which union leaders presented the new agreement and recommended its acceptance. The men, however, shouted down their leaders and voted to strike. A few reported for work this morning, but left when they learned of the action of the meeting.

Millus Said the Company Had Underestimated production of the cheaper type of shoe required the 25 per cent cuts to keep its factory open and its men working. On the average, he said, that policy proved successful and the men had more employment than workers in some other factories in the district. Average earnings for all types of work in the past six months, he said, had been about $16 a week. Skilled workers, McMorrow added, have earned about $35 a week.

Strike Unauthorized.

If the workers persist in refusing the agreement, McMorrow said, the international union would support the company and disciplinary action may follow an unauthorized strike. He said he had telephoned the national industrial recovery administration that he regarded the action of the workers as a violation of their arbitration agreement and of the spirit of the administration's recovery plans.

Two shots Monday night roused neighbors, who saw flames shoot from the Rider home. After the fire, the charred bodies of the aged pair were found. They had been Railroads which haul coal to St. Louis have refused to grant the city a reduction of freight rates on coal, although they reduced the rate for the Board of Education by one-third. Federal law permits special rates for public bodies. The standard rate to St. Louis from nearby Illinois mines is $1.11 a ton, but the Board of Education recently was given a rate of 75 cents. The standard rate will be lowered in about two months to $1.06.

When bids were taken by the city recently for 2500 tons of lump coal for the Water Division, a low offer of coal, at the mine, of $1 a ton was received, with rail delivery, making the cost $2.11 a ton. However, the S. Seidel Coal & Coke Co. offered coal at $1.40 at the mine, in St. Clair County, plus 65 cents a ton for delivery by motor truck, a total of $2.05. Following refusal of the railroads to cut their rate, the Supply Commissioner awarded the contract to the Seidel company. Virtually all of the city's coal supply has come by rail heretofore but there is keen competition by dealers using truck delivery.

The city was informed of the railroads' refusal by L. A. Sackbauer, coal agent of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, representing the various lines. He wrote: "This conclusion was reached as a result of the new deal, which will no doubt bring about increases in prices of all commodities, labor, etc." He asserted a reduced rate might well "draw other rates and bring requests from other municipalities for lower rates on coal and other commodities."

Bids for the city's annual coal supply of 133,800 tons have been received, but no decision has been made as to contract awards. Those involving truck delivery call for an average of about 85 cents a ton for hauling.

SHOULDER INJURY MAY HANDICAP PERRY IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

ENGLISH STAR NOT LIKELY TO PLAY DOUBLES
AGAINST U. S.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
AUTEUIL, France, July 19.—With two more days of practice facing them before they meet the British team in the interzone final leading to the Davis Cup challenge round, the American tennis internationalists today were conceding a "fighting chance" by Vernon S. Prentiss, non-playing captain.

Prentiss' "fighting chance" didn't ring true, for the Americans are favorites by long odds to defeat the British for the right to challenge the French cup defendents. Play will begin Friday with two singles matches. The doubles will be played Saturday with the remaining two singles held over for the expected big crowd, Sunday.

The American squad was hard at work on the first two practice courts yesterday, while the Britons were hitting them over the net on adjacent courts.

Prentiss was on the sidelines calling instructions to Ellsworth Vines Jr., the American ace; and Wilmer Allison, who alternated in singles matches against George Lott and John Van Ryn, the American doubles team, and Keith Giedhill, the team's spare.

Vine's Service Inaccurate.

Vines' cannonball service was inaccurate and the California star concentrated on it through the practice session. Allison devoted a lot of time to his backhand and kept away from the net.

The English squad played easily, undaunted.

Prentiss said after the practice: "We have a fighting chance against the English. But it must be remembered that Perry and Bunny Austin are among the world's six best players. Look what they did to the Australians."

"Look what" means that the British beat Australia, 3 to 2, with Austin and Lee both losing to Jack Crawford, the Australian No. 1 mark. A doubles win and victories by Austin and Perry over Vivian McGrath, Australia's second man, gave England a victory.

But Prentiss would not be denied his "fighting chance" chatter. He added: "Our boys are only kids, and they're irregular and uncertain even though they're brilliant when they play to win."

Perry's Shoulder Ailing.

Conjecture over the condition of Fred Perry's shoulder was increased and Britain's chances of beating the United States slumped accordingly, as England's top ranked star left for France yesterday ranking he was "all right" but that a muscle had been torn in his shoulder during the conquest of Australia in the European zone final last week.

With Perry in anything but top condition, Britain is conceded little chance. Perry took part in two of Great Britain's three match victories, defeating the young Vivian McGrath in the singles and pairing with the veteran George Patrick Hughes in the doubles. The injury kept him out of the final singles.

H. G. N. Lee probably will be named to take Perry's place in the doubles, teaming with Hughes, if it is decided that Perry's shoulder can not stand the strain of three successive days of play.

The French believe that Austin will be the underdog against both Ellsworth Vines, American champion, and Wilmer Allison, second singles player, making it necessary for Perry to be both and help further with a doubles conquest of George Lott and John Van Ryn if Britain is to gain the challenge round.

WOMEN SWIMMERS START NATIONAL TITLE MEET TOMORROW

The Associated Press.

DETROIT, July 19.—The Los Angeles Athletic Club relay swimming team last night won the 400-yard relay in a National Junior A. A. U. championship event, covering the distance in 3:45.6, to better a 12-year-old mark of 3:51 set by a team which included Norman Ross and Johnny Weissmuller.

The Los Angeles team was made up of Bartels, Kalli, Kaye and Cunningham. The Detroit Athletic Club, first placed, followed by the Cleveland Y. M. C. A.,

Nelson Otis, 17-year-old schoolboy from the Cleveland Y. won the 440-yard free style event, in 5:36, followed by Clayton Mains, Detroit Athletic Club, second, and Peter Choate, Duquesne, Pa., third.

Albert Glisidor of Ohio State University outdistanced the field in the 440-yard breast stroke, with a mark of 6:29.3. Michael Brodi, Duquesne, Pa., was third, following Dick McLeish, University of Michigan, who finished second.

Johnny Kaye of Los Angeles, took a close decision from Ralph Flanagan, Miami, Fla., in the 220-yard back stroke, covering the distance in 2:45.5.

The women's 200-yard relay went to the Coyne A. C. team from Pittsburgh. The National junior women's 100-meter back stroke was won by Catherine Gibbons of Pittsburgh in 1:30.

Dickey, a brother of Bill Dickey, star receiver for the New York Yankees, is under option to the Newark team of the International League.

Hubert captured two events, while Miss Snow and St. Stephen's won one race each.

The other three, True Romance, Aphrodite and Resurrection, have not faced the barrier since recovering from a siege of coughing that swiped the Eastern stables during the spring, but they are about ready for the races. Resurrection, once considered a Kentucky Derby prospect, probably will start at Saratoga, where with St. Stephen, he is heavily engaged in the three-year-old stakes.

Although taking his new job too well to give it up and return to his first love, St. Stephen still believes he could get down to riding weight and hold his own with the best of the present crop of jockeys.

RUTH BAILEY TO PLAY MISS PEER IN MUNY TENNIS

Ruth Bailey, former St. Louis District champion, will oppose Billie Peir in the third round of the women's Municipal tennis championships on the Jefferson Memorial courts in Forest Park this afternoon. The match is scheduled to start at 5:15 o'clock.

Mrs. Bailey drew a bye in the opening round and then won from her doubles partner, Mrs. Ella Dietz-Felberg, in the second round.

In 1928 Miss Bailey won the Municipal singles title, defeating Mrs. Anna Endicott Richert in the final. Last year the season, Miss Bailey won from Mrs. Virginia Dusker, present champion, in the semifinals of the St. Louis District championship.

Miss Peir won from Henrietta Wrausman and Melita Howard in her first two matches. Last year Miss Howard won from Miss Peir in the Kingshighway Club tournament and the result in present event was a reversal. Miss Peir showed an improved game in her first two matches, but her strokes are hardly strong enough to cope with those of Miss Bailey.

CUP PLAY

RAY'S COLUMN

Fred Newton of Clinton, Ok., in 1931 swam the Mississippi from Minneapolis to New Orleans, an estimated distance of 2300 miles, in 72 swimming hours—or something less than four miles an hour.

That is accounted for by the speed of the river current, which in the Mississippi, frequently reaches more than four miles an hour.

The 10-mile swim from the mouth of the Rockies to Eads Bridge, sponsored in other days by the Missouri Athletic Club, had a record of around an hour and one-half, or at the rate of 62 miles an hour.

Swimming in dead water is something else. The swimmer who can achieve 240 miles in still water in one month, swimming four hours a day, will certainly earn himself a niche in the Hall of Fame.

Outswam a Sea Lion.

PERHAPS the queerest of many weird endurance efforts performed by swimmers was that of Otto Klemmer of Berlin, Germany, in 1922. He wagered that he could outswim a sea lion in an endurance test.

Both entered the pool at the same time, the records disclose. The sea lion was compelled to keep swimming as long as he was able. Otto, too, paddled on.

After 42 hours the sea lion collapsed. Klemmer kept on for 46 hours, then quit.

KILLEFER RESIGNS AS BROWNS' MANAGER; SOTHORN IN CHARGE

connected with the probable ownership of a minor league club, "Red Fox," as his friends kidingly call Bill, first entered major league baseball as catcher for the Philadelphia National League Club in 1912 and at once made himself solid. He became the battery mate of the mighty Grover Cleveland Alexander, and the two became inseparable companions.

In 1918 Alexander and Killefer were sold to the Cubs and remained there for a number of years. Killefer later was made manager of the team for a short time and was then released.

In 1923 he came to the Cardinals and under Hornsby and was instrumental in bringing Alexander to the Cards. It was the coming of Alex that played such a big part in winning the pennant and the world's championship that season. When Hornsby was released as manager of the Cardinals that winter, Killefer might have been his successor, but he announced that he would not accept the post, as it might be thought he had undermined Hornsby to get the position. Instead, he went to the Browns as coach and has been with the club ever since, until his resignation to day.

ALBANY KIDNAPING VICTIM GONE 12 DAYS

Rumors of Success of Negotiations for Release Based on Family's Cheerfulness.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 19.—Lieut. John J. O'Connell Jr., kidnapped July 7, may be home before nightfall if nothing has happened to the negotiations," an authority said today.

rumors that part of the $250,000 ransom demanded had been paid were based largely on the family's sudden shift from a troubled uneasiness to open optimism.

The private negotiations between the O'Connell family and the abductors are thought to have been completed yesterday with the printing in a New York newspaper of a note sent by one of the go-betweens to authorities.

The father of the missing youth has dropped from sight for several days. The kidnaped youth's mother has fully recovered from illness brought on by worry over her son's abduction.

Cement Company Increases Pay. HANNIBAL, Mo., July 19.—An increase of 15 per cent in the wages of employees of the Universal Atlas Cement Co. plant here was announced yesterday, effective at once. Labor will receive 37 cents an hour, instead of 28 cents formerly paid.

Ex-Con-

Senator Couzens Among Those Slipping Away in Advance of Adjournment, Departs Tomorrow.

NO STATEMENT TILL HE SEES ROOSEVELT

Thinks Meeting Fute, Won't Reassemble; Hull Trying to Keep Important Work Alive.

By CHARLES G. BOSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, July 19.—Delegates are beginning to fold up tents and quietly slip away from the dying London conference. Preceding the rest of the American group, Senator Couzens will depart Thursday. Until after his report to Roosevelt, Couzens will make no public statement regarding results of the parley, but it is no secret that he believes the conference has been completely futile and will not reassemble in the autumn. If there is a further meeting, Couzens thinks it will be of much smaller scope and deal with pressing problems of international exchange.

Secretary Hull is more optimistic. Hull is working for some arrangement that will keep important committees alive for continuous study of world trade and other problems and he appears confident this end will be realized. He hopes that, after a period of some months, to give the United States and other nations an opportunity to put their respective houses in order, the conference will reassemble in an atmosphere more conducive to useful results.

Believes in a Golden Mean.

Despite a certain amount of disillusionment which he must have received, Hull remains an idealist. He has surrendered none of his fundamental views as to the necessity of international co-operation. Between complete economic nationalism and extreme internationalism, he believes there is a golden mean which attainable day will attain.

Meantime he sees tied in an economic knot which this conference has been unable to break. He has had it brought forcibly home to him that economic disarmament is even more difficult to achieve than military disarmament.

IT TAKES
HEALTHY NERVES
TO PUT A DRY FLY WHERE YOU WANT IT
EVERY TIME

• ABOVE—ARTHUR J. NEU, of East Orange, N. J., pulls in a nice one! Few men know the importance of healthy nerves better than Arthur Neu does. He is national champion in dry fly casting for accuracy. Just as a stunt, Mr. Neu has frequently flicked the ash off a friend's cigarette with a fly at 35 feet!

ARTHUR J. NEU, champion fly-caster, says:

"Dry-fly fishing is a delicate art that takes the best a man's got in steadiness of hand and eye. To win the championship in accuracy at casting a dry fly, I had to have healthy nerves. And yet I smoke steadily—all I want to—without disturbing my nerves. That's because I prefer Camels. There is no question but that they are milder. And their rich, inviting flavor seems to say, 'Have another.'"

Turn to Camels. Like Mr. Neu you will find that Camels are milder...that their flavor suits your taste...that steady smoking never jangles your nerves. So begin today!

Camel's Costlier Tobacco

NEVER GET ON YOUR NERVES
NEVER TIRE YOUR TASTE

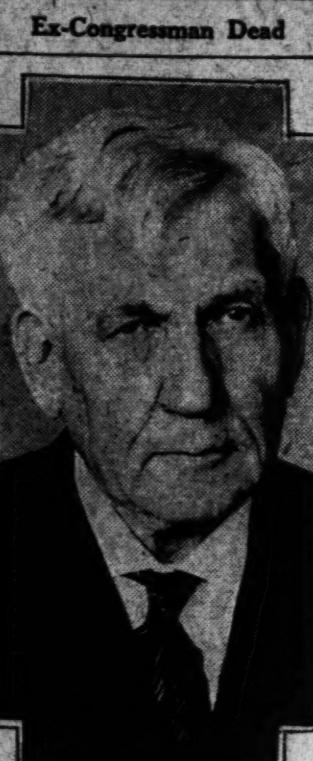

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. The more you smoke them, the more you'll like them. Costlier tobacco do taste better.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Quarrel With Roosevelt Policies.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A comparative business chart has been issued by the Cleveland Trust Co. covering conditions since 1927 in the United States, Canada, Germany, England, France, Belgium, Italy and Japan. It shows how these nations have been marching in step, economically. They all went down together in 1929, and all (except Canada) started up together in May and June of 1932. The other nations kept on going up, while we took a five-month drop after the election, resuming with a sharp rise in April, 1933, when Canada also started up.

This chart clearly reveals that no one government was responsible for the three-year downturn, and that no one Government or political medicine could be credited with the general recovery. Certainly no program of depreciated currency had anything to do with it.

Notwithstanding plenty of evidence of an international economic upturn, the seal of our administration seems to have developed into a veritable frenzy, and it is now becoming plain that, as a result of wild haste and little consideration to important matters, serious mistakes have been made, and are still being made, that will impinge heavily upon the public sickening to contemplate, and which they had no idea would be foisted upon them when they voted on Nov. 8.

At a time when world prices are already rising, and when our prices would naturally rise fast enough of their own accord, they are, in addition, being forced up here by the threat of unnecessary greenback inflation, plus food and clothing tax, plus the wild and dangerous price-lifting propaganda of the Recovery Act, plus the prospects of a special four-billion-dollar Government spending program, about half of which state governments are expected to double from local a vital matter.

With Alabama and Arkansas in the wet column, the dry's off-threshold boat that 13 states could always be corralled to thwart repeal has collapsed.

Alabama and Arkansas are the last two straws to break the camel's back.

ANOTHER LIFE TO SCIENCE.

The operator of a Roentgen-ray machine is now protected by a screen. It was not so in the days when Dr. Frederick Henry Baertner began his experiments with that strange and remarkable device. His hands came in contact with the rays, and he suffered accordingly. When he died the other day in Baltimore, where he was professor of clinical Roentgenology in the Johns Hopkins Medical School, he was lacking all his fingers and was practically blind in one eye. His pioneering work in an uncharted field had caused him to undergo nearly 100 operations, and almost unceasing misery. In a very real sense, it is the self-sacrificing martyrs who have made possible the onward march of medical science. If it seems sometimes that they have taken unnecessary risks, it is because we look back on a well-lighted past, while they peered into a dark unknown. Dr. Baertner was such a hero.

PERFECTING THE REPEAL MACHINERY.

Gov. Park has set the precinct mass meetings and county and senatorial district conventions called for by the Weeks Act on three consecutive days, July 26, 27 and 28. The mass meetings, which begin the process of nominating convention delegates, will be held the day after the Governor issues his official proclamation, and thus compress into four days this part of the repeal machinery.

The Post-Dispatch welcomes the use of this compact procedure, not because it is in line with the program which we proposed to Gov. Park, June 27, but because in any event it would be unfortunate to spend more time than necessary in dealing with the mass meetings and nominating conventions. They constitute a fifth wheel, so to speak, and the sooner they are done with them the better.

How efficacious is the precinct mass meeting idea remains to be seen. While they are wholly unnecessary, we must make the most of them. In compliance with the Weeks Act, Gov. Park has called on the voters in each of some 4200 precincts in the State to assemble at designated places a week from today, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The theory is that voters favoring repeal and those opposed will attend and that each group will choose a pair of delegates to represent its view at the next higher convention. While the machinery will run more smoothly if delegates are nominated by each precinct and in turn by each county and senatorial district, the law empowers the Governor to fill any vacancies.

E. J. SPRING.

(Tolls from the Municipal Bridge, as has frequently been explained in the press, are being used to pay interest and principal on the $4,000,000 relief bond issue, passed by the voters last November, to provide funds for the destitute unemployed.—Editor's note.)

Federal Aid for University City.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
THE Recovery Act, recently passed by Congress, appropriates the first three billion dollars to be spent in a huge public works program. Under this act provision has been made for cities to obtain aid from the Government for needed public improvements.

Immediately on passage of the act, Mayor Dickmann of St. Louis hurried to Washington to put forward his program for municipal improvements, and asked for over $40,000,000 to carry out his program. Other cities, likewise, have sent in their requests.

University City has its need for public works, but the matters of sewer and street extension, street width and grade cut-offs; park and playground improvements and extensions, which demand our consideration. There is also the problem of grade crossings. We might consider, too, the question of building a municipal light plant and a municipal water works.

Gen. Mohler, City Attorney of Clayton, has attacked the legality of a part of St. Louis County Court bond issue proposal, pointing out that the municipalities cannot rely too strongly on the County Court plan for obtaining their "finances." The County Court plan presents too many obstacles to include the municipalities in its program. Attorney Mr. Hutton says the county has no authority to lend money to the incorporated areas or to use county bond funds for financing purely municipal profits. . . . Under the new Federal aid legislation, the municipalities themselves have the right to borrow money on deserved improvements from the Federal Government."

University City should at once initiate its own building program as a basis for getting aid from the Federal Government. An excellent opportunity is afforded Mayor Miller and the administration to demonstrate real leadership and initiative in a situation attracting the attention of everyone.

BREAKING THE CAMEL'S BACK.

With large majorities for repeal in Alabama and Arkansas, the first states below the Mason and Dixon line to pass on the question, it seems certain that nation-wide repeal is only a matter of a few more months.

If the drys had any hope of stopping the repeal avalanche, it was in the traditionally dry South. Alabama first went dry in 1907, when only four other states were in that category and, while it is true the dry law was repealed in 1911, it was re-enacted in 1915. Arkansas voted dry in 1915, five years before the eighteenth amendment went into effect. Both states have been strongholds of the Anti-Saloon League, and until last year hardly a candidate for any office in either state had the temerity to oppose that once-formidable organization.

Yesterday's result bears out the 1933 Literary Digest poll, showing only two states in the Union—North Carolina and Kansas—to be dry. That poll was the first clear indication that repeal was a possibility. It was followed by the desertion of the dry cause by John D. Rockefeller Jr., whose money and influence had long been one of its greatest pillars of strength. Nomination of Mr. Roosevelt in June, 1932, on a straight repeal platform was the third major factor.

Since the Blaine resolution was passed in the closing days of the Hoover regime, 18 states have voted for repeal, or exactly half the necessary number. Tennessee votes tomorrow, while Oregon votes Friday. Dates for voting this year have been set in 15 other states. Two states—Utah and Montana—have set up repeal machinery and are expected to vote this year. Virginia's Legislature will soon be in special session for the specific purpose of acting on repeal. It has been stated by Gov. Allen of Louisiana that, if his State's ratification is needed to bring about ratification by the end of the year, he will call a special session. Ordinarily, the Louisiana Legislature meets in even-numbered years. Thus, it is altogether likely that the twenty-first amendment will be in force, as Postmaster-General Farley has predicted, by Christmas.

Undoubtedly, in addition to all of the other pressing reasons for repeal, one of the uppermost in voters' minds is the relief that would be given to the nation's finances. With the revenues from beer, liquor taxes are expected to produce about a billion dollars a year, or more than one-fourth of the current ordinary expenses of the Federal Government. Because of the tremendous expenditures authorized under the recovery program, this new source of revenue becomes a vital matter.

With Alabama and Arkansas in the wet column, the dry's off-threshold boat that 13 states could always be corralled to thwart repeal has collapsed. Alabama and Arkansas are the last two straws to break the camel's back.

JEFFERSON SAID IT.

Summarizing "Great Words in American History," R. H. L., columnist of the Chicago Tribune, heads his collection with "Let us avoid all foreign entanglements," which is ascribed to George Washington. This leads us to add an item to the debunking of Washington, and to assert flat-footedly that Washington never said it. True, the first President devoted much of his farewell address to advising the infant Republic along this line, but the closest he came to the familiar quotation was to say: "It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world."

The statement about entanglements is usually ascribed to Washington, but it was Jefferson who uttered it. In his first inaugural address the latter said: "Honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none . . . I deem (one of the) essential principles of our Government." The phrase was a favorite with Jefferson, for he used it on other occasions in his writings and addresses, as: "Let our affairs be disengaged from those of other nations, except as to commerce," and "The fundamental principle of our Government, never to entangle us with the broils of Europe." Yet, so tickle is fame and so faulty is the memory of those who quote the great, that "foreign entanglements" has become almost synonymous with Washington's farewell address.

ITALY IN THE AIR.

The successful mass flight of 24 seaplanes from Italy to Chicago is the crowning achievement of Italian flying skill in the last decade, and emphasizes how that country has been developing its air forces in that time. No less than 63 world records in aviation had been set by Italian flyers between 1924 and the end of last year, including altitude, endurance, speed and distance marks. An Italian flyer, De Bernardi, won the Schneider Cup race in 1928, but three subsequent British victories ended the competition for that trophy. However, Italian attempts at speed records were continued, and three months ago Warrant Officer Agello excelled the British mark with a flight at the rate of 422.7 miles per hour. This was officially recognized, and Agello later made an unofficial record of 446 miles per hour.

Yet there were collected in London a very large number of eminent men, and in the long intervals while they waited for the Committee on Committees to choose the subcommittee to which the latest proposal to form a committee was to be referred, there was a large amount of discussion and penetrating discussion of the real questions which trouble mankind. It is in this exchange of ideas, though they have produced no immediate practical result, that there is a certain compensation for the time and energy and money spent on bringing the conference together.

For listening to conversations here and there, my most definite impression is of the intensity with which responsible men from all quarters of the globe are watching the course of events in the United States. Their interest is comparable only with that which for years has centered on the Russian experiment. Yet it is of a different sort.

What is most happening in Russia has touched the greater part of the world through its mind and its emotions. The American experiment touches it immediately and vitally in its ordinary affairs. These direct impact of American events, due to the immense weight of the American economic system, has made these events the central fact in contemporary history. Rightly or wrongly, men feel that their own destinies are bound up with our success or failure.

One can find in all countries men who are enthusiasts for the Roosevelt policies, and also, of course, men who are absolutely certain they must fail. But by far the largest

DIGNITY AT ANGELUS TEMPLE.

David L. Hutton, third husband of Aimee Semple McPherson, has injected a new note into the Angelus Temple atmosphere. Mr. Hutton stands on his dignity. When his evangelist wife came from Paris that she had presented him with a nine-pound son, a statement considerably contrary to fact, he spurred the splendid publicity it imparted to the Four-Square cause, but viewed it on the higher moral ground that it made him appear ridiculous. Although he knew the temple stood at a financial crisis, and needed a dramatic gesture such as the kidnaping that put it back on its feet a few years ago, Mr. Hutton sternly condemned the procedure as unethical.

The disillusioned man drew into his shell of reserve, displaying his stand by remarking, courteously but decisively, "I was just Aimee's pet goat." He will redeem property, Mr. Hutton declares, by seeking a divorce, in the well-known dignity and reserve they should be still higher.

of the Los Angeles courts. Further, he will seek respite from his embarrassment and heal his wounded sensibilities in the austere calm of a vandeville tour. He will not, of course, be a stage attraction because of his status as Aimee's ex-husband; what will draw the crowds is his renown as a baritone choir singer. It is a noble resolve, and should teach Aimee to mend her publicity-seeking ways.

NEW DEAL PHILOSOPHY.

Writing in the New York Times Magazine, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Tugwell outlines the philosophical basis of the New Deal. Stripped of its literary embellishments, the professor's thesis amounts to this:

Personal greed, given free reign under the archaic, anarchistic dogma of free competition, brought upon us a social crisis, in which we were forced to choose between violent and peaceful revolution. When we elected Mr. Roosevelt, we revolutionized public purposes and procedures. It is now the purpose of our Government to distribute income more equitably, to restore the mass buying power of the people, to provide employment, to increase leisure, to guarantee security. It is now recognized that this purpose is to be fulfilled, not through the wasteful processes of unrestricted competition, but through efficient combination under effective public control. This control is to be made effective by the political devices of concentrated authority and wide discretion under permanent powers. Its successful exercise demands courageous experimentation. Progress toward its ultimate objectives is to be made only through an opportunism which will not hesitate to shift its course to meet the exigencies of the immediate situation. Dogmatic allegiance to traditional institutions and fixed forms of government must yield to an attitude which appraises all activity in the light of its functional contribution to the final goal of social well-being.

There may be no new idea in this thesis. But its appearance as the theoretical basis of the policy of an American national administration is something new under the sun.

Impressions From Abroad

DURING the voyage home, I have been trying to set out and arrange the many different views and impressions which I gathered in Europe. A great deal of what is not unlike a first night at Broadway: not infrequently the audience is more interested than the play, and what is said in the lobbies is more to the point than what is said on the stage. Certainly that was true in London. It was obvious from the start that the author had provided a plot that not even they found very interesting, and as for the actors, it was to too painful to say that they had never had a full-dress rehearsal.

Because of their intense preoccupation with our experiment, they are not really any more ready than we are to discuss questions which cannot be settled intelligently until the result is known. That is why the conference was stalled from the start in London. It was obvious from the start that the author had provided a plot that not even they found very interesting, and as for the actors, it was to too painful to say that they had never had a full-dress rehearsal.

Some few philosophers here and there have tested that this interest in men and specific measures was a misunderstanding of what was happening. Their view is that there is a certain compensation for the time and energy and money spent on bringing the conference together.

For listening to conversations here and there, my most definite impression is of the intensity with which responsible men from all quarters of the globe are watching the course of events in the United States. Their interest is comparable only with that which for years has centered on the Russian experiment.

What is most happening in Russia has touched the greater part of the world through its mind and its emotions. The American experiment touches it immediately and vitally in its ordinary affairs. These direct impact of American events, due to the immense weight of the American economic system, has made these events the central fact in contemporary history. Rightly or wrongly, men feel that their own destinies are bound up with our success or failure.

One can find in all countries men who are enthusiasts for the Roosevelt policies, and also, of course, men who are absolutely certain they must fail. But by far the largest number of men I met were in a mood which might be described as one of anxious fidgeting, not unlike that in which they wait for a game of cards to end, a tight rope. On the whole, they seemed to agree that the chasm had to be crossed and that our tight rope was the only way there was to cross it quickly. They desperately hoped we shall cross, not because they are excessively benevolent, but because they do not wish to feel the effects of a bad accident.

It would be hard for anybody short of a confirmed gloom-monger to allege that we do not appear to have turned the corner at last. The upward swing seems to have set in. Prosperity may, indeed, be reconquered there is enough persistence and intelligence.

Yet, if the applecart is not surely to be upset, it is absolutely necessary to recognize that all that has happened so far is a temporary victory. But, as far as it goes, it is a temporary victory, but it is a victory which has been built primarily on psychological grounds—restored confidence in our banks, the stimulus of a new administration and executing his policies.

Some few philosophers here and there have tested that this interest in men and specific measures was a misunderstanding of what was happening. Their view is that there is a certain compensation for the time and energy and money spent on bringing the conference together.

To imagine that Mr. Roosevelt's fundamental program of reconstruction has begun to take hold already is to defy obvious facts. It will be months before his farm bill, work relief act, rather than administration, public works projects and the like will begin to bear any decisive fruits. And even Mr. Roosevelt himself has admitted that much of this legislation is experimental.

But none of these things will accomplish anything permanent or fundamental unless we continue with the sweeping and comprehensive attack upon the evils and weaknesses of the past.

To imagine that Mr. Roosevelt's fundamental program of reconstruction has begun to take hold already is to defy obvious facts.

For these reasons, it is absolutely essential that we take the attitude that we have a fighting chance only if we do all in our power to forward recovery.

Some of the prerequisites of prosperity afford an illuminating indication of what will be necessary before we can settle back complacently. We shall have to deal effectively with the 237 billion dollars of long and short-term debts in this country, which come within a parity of 10 billions of dollars to our total national wealth. So long as this burden hangs about us, we are bound to be handicapped in any effort to create Utopia. There are 10 billions in bank deposits still tied up in whole or in part.

Fourteen million or more adults are still without work. It is hard to see how more than 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 of these can be absorbed into industry or put to work on public projects within a year or more. This would still leave 10,000,000 unemployed—a figure which would have been regarded as staggering in the Coolidge New Jerusalem days. Wage payments are off 50 per cent, as compared with 1929, and they were too low then. The wage scale of the industrial workers has been reduced to 40 per cent of what it was in 1929.

Farm income is off about 60 per cent, as compared with 1929, and the farmers were in desperate straits then. Wheat prices may soar, but if a drought ruins the wheat crop, the farmers will be little better off.

Inadequate expenditures on recovery are pure waste. If we must push a man out of the ditch, we only waste our time and his efforts which fall to be gained definitely over the bank. In the end, he sinks more deeply into the mire and we are exhausted by futile exertions.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, July 19.—HOT political tip has leaked from high administration quarters:

The inside word is that Frank C. Walker, self-effacing treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, is slated for an early Cabinet post. The post is in the Treasury portfolio. Secretary Woodin, absent from Washington for weeks because of a recurring throat ailment, continues to be present such "jumping the gun." It was inevitable under an unregulated, private profit system.

But these vast stores of commodities, unsupported by an increased purchasing power which under the most favorable auspices is still months off, are a grave danger to the reviving business situation. Unless disposed of they may largely undo the labors of the NIRA, flatten out the rising curve of prices and production, and cause a cataclysmic relapse.

So the President suddenly decided to look to foreign markets.

Contrats.

GENERAL HUGH JOHNSON, industrial dictator, was offered a cabinet salary—$15,000 a year by President Roosevelt. But he decided he would abide by the $6000-a-year limit fixed for officials of the new agency.

A. E. Hutchinson, secretary of the Home Loan Board, served for many years as secretary to William F. Stevenson, now chairman of the board, when the latter was a member of Congress. Hutchinson's salary then was $3600. Under the New Deal he jumped to $6000 a year. But only for a short time.

A few weeks after he took office this was boosted to $8000.

Merry-Go-Round.

F and when the Soviet government is recognized, it has a magnificent embassy all ready and waiting for its ambassador. . . . The old imperial Russian embassy, a big, gray, 64-room building on Sixteenth street, has been boarded up for 13 years. . . . The last occupant was Boris Bakhtkemiet, representative of the Kerensky regime. . . . The building is in good condition but lacks a few of its many rooms and furniture.

Hundreds of files and packing cases, each numbered and catalogued, fill the basement. . . . A White Russian family, resident in the chancery, has acted as caretaker. . . . They were left there by Bakhtkemiet, when he departed in 1920.

A separate press representative for each individual commodity that it administers is included in the press division of the new Farm Relief Administration. . . . As a member of the House last year, Connecticut's Democratic Senator Ladd emerged had two newspapers from his state covering Washington on his payroll. . . . Home outcry against this act forced him to let them out.

"Professor Mole."

THE day before Prof. Moley arrived in London, the London Times, staid pillar of the British Empire, carried the following in its column of letters to the editor:

"I was a Fourth Estate boy. I could translate 'vis consilium expers mole ruit sua' thus: 'Do you want advice?' Moley is rushing from the U. S. A." (Signed) T. A. Lang, Sunningdale.

U. S. IS PRESSING SPAIN TO FREE FIVE AMERICANS

Five Americans imprisoned June 4, Malacca authorities have ordered a physician to examine Mrs. Caroline Douglass, one of the prisoners, who has spent her 44 days of confinement.

The physician will determine whether Mrs. Douglass is approaching a nervous breakdown, as her husband and the three other American maid-servants. They are held at the State Department at Washington. Anyone reviewing our statements concerning the jail conditions to which we are subjected will agree we are justified in hoping that it will not take long for Washington authorities to bring all weight and influence to bear. We are writing this on the forty-fourth day of our imprisonment."

DR. LOEB'S TWIN DAUGHTERS WIN SCHOLARSHIPS AT WELLS

One year scholarships have been awarded to Miss Fannie and Miss Bertha Loeb, twin daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Isidor Loeb, 105 Arundel place, Clifton, at Wells College, Aurora, N. Y. Dr. Loeb is dean of the school of business and public administration of Washington University.

The scholarships are of three hundred dollars each. The two young women took a college board examination last month, when they were graduated from Mary Institute.

DR. ISADOR ABRAHAMSON Dies.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Word was received here yesterday of the death of Dr. Isador Abrahamson, neurologist, at his summer home at Lake Pleasant, N. Y., yesterday. He was 61. Dr. Abrahamson, a native of New York, was prominent in educational work in connection with the treatment of mental and nervous diseases.

To imagine that Mr. Roosevelt's fundamental program of reconstruction has begun to take hold already is to defy obvious facts. It will be many months before his farm bill, second, and railroad reorganization, public works projects and the like will begin to bear fruit. Even Mr. Roosevelt himself has admitted that much of this legislation is experimental.

Some of the prerequisites of prosperity afford an illuminating indication of what will be necessary before we can settle back complacently. We shall have to deal effectively with the 23 billion dollars of long and short-term debts in this country, which come within a forty 10 billions of equaling our total national debt. So long as these burdens hang about our necks we are bound to be handicapped in any effort to create Utopia. There are 10 billions in bank deposits still tied up in whole or in part.

Fourteen million or more adults are still without work. It is hard to see how more than 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 of them can be absorbed into industry or put to work on public projects within a year or more. This would still leave 10,000,000 unemployed—a figure which would have been regarded as staggering in the Coolidge New Jerusalem days. Wage payments are off 50 per cent, as compared with 1929, and they were too low then. The wages scales in the industrial trades thus far formulated are too low. Farm income is off about 60 per cent, as compared with 1929, and the farmers were in desperate straits then. Wheat prices may soar, but if a drought ruins the wheat crop, the farmers will be little better off.

Inadequate expenditures on recovery are pure waste. If we must push a man out of the ditch, we only waste our time and his efforts which fail to get him definitely over the bank. In the end, he sinks more deeply into the mire and we are exhausted by futile exertions.

CULBERTSON IS 2180 BEHIND ENGLISH TEAM

London Contract Bridge Match Has Gone Through, 119 Boards, 190 Remaining.

LONDON, July 19.—With 119 boards played and 18 remaining, Ely Culbertson's American contract bridge team of four was 2180 points behind the English today.

England had 28,000 points, the Americans 25,000. The English lead was accumulated in three afternoons and two nights of play, with two afternoons and three nights to go. The play is for the Charles M. Schwab trophy.

While the lead is not large for this stage of the match, there is the question of endurance to consider, for eight hours of bridge a day is trying. The English have reserve players; the Americans have not. The English have used so far, however, what the Americans cut. The Americans cut the English lead a bit last night when Graham Matheson replaced Col. H. M. Beasley, but after Matheson hit his stride the English lead began to increase again.

Culbertson gave notice that he felt bound to insist on penalties. On one hand Col. Beasley passed out of turn. Theodors A. Lightner and Culbertson looked at each other. Lightner made a bid, thereby waiving penalty on Col. Beasley.

Here was a hand on which Culbertson was set at four spades and George Morris of the British team fulfilled the contract:

◆K4-3	◆K3-2	◆KQ-2

At the table where Lightner sat and Culbertson West, with Col. WHEAT FUTURES TUMBLE 11 1-2¢ ON LOCAL BOARD

Top Heavy Market Here and on Other Grain Centers Crack as Traders Attempt to "Cash In" Profits.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EX-
CHANGE, July 19.—The wheat market tumbled late today, virtually under its own weight, after the dizzy flight of recent weeks, and final prices were off 9¢ at 11½ cents.

Similar conditions ruled on other grain boards.

The rush to save all profits possible cracked the market. "Stop" orders were also probably a factor.

The speed with which futures have advanced and fallen in spot grain to follow continued a factor in market. While it was pointed out that the high level would move Argentine offers, it was also noted that the market would probably head off anything of import nature if proposed.

Winnipeg closed 6¢ at 70¢ lower.

Liverpool came 3¢ up in one cable. The close was 5¢ to 4¢ net higher.

September wheat opened at $1.16, down 3¢; and Dec. wheat at $1.19, off 4¢.

Emily Post on Weddings
Martha Carr Offers AdviceIF YOU ASK
MY OPINION
By MARTHA CARR

Dear Mrs. Carr:
I HAVE decided to ask you to help me. I have been a widow 15 years, but have been going with an old friend the past seven years. We knew each other and went together as pals in our younger days. Each of us married someone else. Eight years ago, his wife died and I was deprived of my husband by a great tragedy, which also took our son.

My childhood friend came back, and for two years we just enjoyed the old comradeship. He has broached the subject of love, and I would not listen. He went some with other women, but always kept his time free when I would go with him. Though he promised not to speak any more of love, for the past two years he has made life a worry to me, insisting upon our marriage. Being refused again, he has now taken to drinking and running with a wild crowd. He has never done this before.

He says if I will consent to marry him, he will be more than willing to give all this up. I do not love him, but he would make a husband and woman could be proud of. Is it my duty to marry him? Mrs. Carr? Could this man and I make a go of it in the circumstances? Do I owe it to him?

B. A.

While I believe the devotion of the man is worth considering, seriously, I do not believe in the idea of marrying a man "to save him," as it is his own responsibility to save himself. And I cannot see, either, that you owe it to him. You have given him comradeship for companionship. At the same time, since you have shown him that you value his attentions and preference, he may expect more than you are willing to give.

And, since you are not in the "first flush of youth," you probably do not expect the romance of your first marriage to come to you again; but you should know whether or not there would be congeniality and happiness in such a second marriage. No one can decide this for you.

My Dear Mrs. Carr:
PLEASE give me your idea of my problem and tell me if I am right.

My husband has been going to hall dances every Saturday night without me. It is impossible for me to go with him. I want with him longer than I really was able to, because I feel sure he would go without me. I asked him in a nice way, if he wouldn't stop going, but he wouldn't do it.

Is it selfish of me to want him to quit going? I have never gone to a dance without him, and have always taken the best of care of him when he was sick. We have a sweet little 3-year-old boy.

MRS. K.

Really, the least your husband can do in the situation, and in consideration of your condition, is to show you a little nice deference. I should ask him how he would have felt had you gone out for diversion when he was ill. But I think, at the same time, you might well compromise, with a sort of well-bred courtesy, that would make you both feel better. Tell him you think, not only for your sake, but for the sake of good taste, he should not go every Saturday night; however, you do not want to deprive him of all pleasure, just because you cannot go out and so want him to go occasionally, to these dances. People will think more of both of you, if you show consideration and some dignity in the matter.

My dear Mrs. Carr:
I HAVE a daughter 16 years old, who thinks everything I do to warn her is "old-fashioned" and past its usefulness in a "modern age." I am sorry to say she has grown almost hard-boiled and scoffs at the little pats and outward expression of affection. She has a very rigid idea of right and wrong, and hoots at some of the sacred inner feelings we all try to have. She simply ignores the conventions.

MOTHER.

Of course, your daughter is just a little girl. And she is at a trying age, when she feels she is neither, and wishes, above all things, to demonstrate that she is grown up. It is very hard to convince such a girl that the conventions are for her protection, and especially is this true when her mother is the main one who attempts to teach her these ideas.

Probably she is a strong character, as this type of girl sometimes shows, but cannot realize where her ideas may lead her.

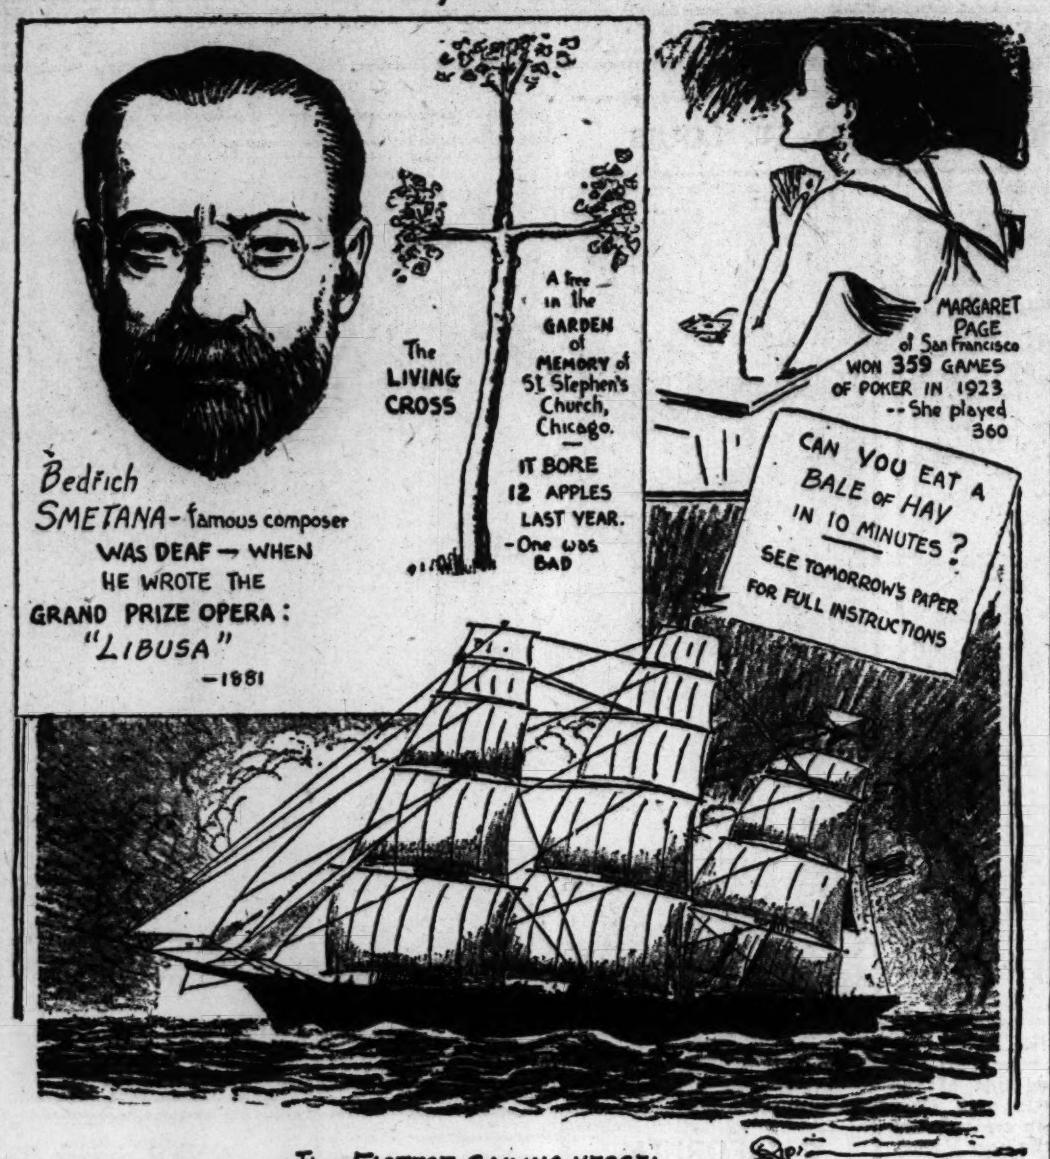

I think, sometimes, great tenderness and the right kind of reading matter will do more for this girl than all the talks in the world. In order to make her see for herself, and to convince her, while inspiring her with a real feeling of charity, too, I would suggest that you have her read Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter."

Keep as close to her as you can,

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest, but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a personal nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

AMERICA THE MOTHER OF SCANDINAVIAN METHODISM

The oldest Scandinavian Methodist House of Worship, built by the Rev. C. Willerup, a Dane, in 1850, is not anywhere in Scandinavia, but in Cambridge, Wis. It was originally known as the First Norwegian Church, and is still used for regular services today.

DOCTOR LOCKE

Doctor Mahlon William Locke of Williamsburg, Ontario, one of the most extraordinary medical specialists of the day, treats an average of 800 patients a day for foot trouble. His office hours are from 8 A.M. till late at night. Every patient is treated by Dr. Locke personally, but the strange doctor accepts no higher fee than $1 per person, and is said to have returned without comment, a fee of $10,000 mailed to him by a rich American patient.

TOMORROW: A Self-Entered Bovine, and explanation of today's cartoon.

Without exactly projecting yourself. And don't forget that a very unusual desire to go to bed has often led to a sleepy feeling of a little child. A tip-toe into the room and a good-night kiss on her cheek, just before she has dropped off into slumber, will be the same consoling mother-stroke that it was when she was a little girl.

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

I do not know exactly how to express myself about my puzzling problem, because I don't want to seem hard. To burst right out with it I have a husband who is so plow that he enjoys making us all feel like sinners. You see, I mean he parades it so, and pats himself on the back. And this has the effect of making the children seek approval too for their little pranks. Of course, it is hard (I suppose) to make him see that it is to glorify himself and look down on others who do not say so much about it.

A BAD WIFE.

We all recognize in ourselves impulses toward misbehavior, and so for a mere mortal man to be so apparently free from definite faults is irritating in the extreme. In the first place, his goodness represents to you probably, not so much comparative goodness, but has been brought about by self-denial and self-control, as passive abstemiousness. He enlarges and de nouces as "bad," some of the smaller faults and misdemeanors, which, compared with real sins, seem "piffing" and "goody-goody."

What I think you resent is that your husband, as well as the children, expects applause from the world for his good behavior, instead of being a clear-thinking independent man, who does right from conviction. However, I think a discerning wife can see his faults and her resources toward making a man see that he is "good" and courageous as well. He probably is a man who has fundamental good, but not according to the independent adult formula.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

MY mother used to make the best peach butter I ever ate. I have tried several times, but have not been able to make it good the way she did. Now that peach time is coming again, I would like to try some. Have you a recipe?

EVERYDAY RELIGION
LIBERTY, OF COURSE!

By THE REV. JOSEPH FORT NEWTON

MY study door opened and a quiet little man entered. Shy, frail, soft-spoken, his eyes made one feel that he had journeyed a long road and passed many graves along the way. At one time he had been the head of a religious community in Russia, but had been driven out, escaping many traps and almost losing his life.

"In America," he said, as we talked together, "men take liberties granted, as a matter of course, but if they had seen what I have seen, it would be different. They do not realize how much it means, because they have forgotten how much it cost. None of us can know what liberty means until we lose it. When liberty goes, everything goes."

"But men are tired of liberty," he said; "at least the Dictator of Italy tells us so. Men want to be ruled; they cannot rule themselves. Liberty only means freedom, endless talk, inefficiency. Men must be told what to do and be made to do it. Otherwise they haggle, hesitate and debate, and get nowhere. Such is the mood of the day, is it not?"

Ten articles, specially selected by Doctor Newton as being the most outstanding so far published in an attractive booklet.

This booklet will be sent without cost to interested readers. Requests should be addressed to Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

burning. Add your spices according to taste.

I have a number of recipes for conserve—which is the mixture of several kinds of fruit and sometimes nuts or raisins, or both, though it may be made without these. The combinations make a very nice flavor and are out of the ordinary.

I will certainly appreciate it if you can help me.

GOOD TASTE

By EMILY POST

Wedding Details

Dear Mrs. Post: I will be about 20 guests at my wedding reception which will be a breakfast served at 11 o'clock. Can you suggest a simple breakfast menu, or is the food prepared as for lunch at this hour? Answer: I should have a real breakfast if I were you. Scrambled eggs with bacon and sausage, coldfish balls and stewed potatoes, cut-up fruit. Hot biscuits and breakfast coffee, and wedding cake to take home. The bride's health might be drunk in any fruit juice. There is no rule about a before noon menu. Have whatever you think would be good.

My Dear Mrs. Post: What sort of wedding presents do the bride and groom give each other? We don't have much money to spend.

Answer: It isn't necessary that they give each other anything. If a pin or a clip or a necklace or a bracelet or a watch. She gives him cuff-links or something like that. In the case you speak of, you might give each other something to use in your future home.

Dear Mrs. Post: I am going to be married soon, for the second time. Is it in very bad taste to use the linen and silver monogrammed with initials of a previous marriage? Or is this entirely a matter of personal feeling?

Answer: It is a matter of personal feeling—but one which I think most men would feel rather strongly against. Don't you?

My Dear Mrs. Post: I have been asked to be "head usher" at a wedding. What additional duties are there in respect of such honor?

Answer: You escort the bride's mother up the aisle. Otherwise, you perhaps see that any habitually late comes among the ushers gets to church on time.

Dear Mrs. Post: My daughter is going to be married soon, and the question has come up as to who is the right person to give her away—her married brother, who does not live at home, or her single brother, who lives at home but is considerably younger than the bride. My husband is dead.

Answer: Her older brother, as head of the family, is decidedly the proper person. But if she cares very much more for her younger brother and does not mind proclaiming this fact, she could in this case choose the younger.

If the Opening Bid Has Been Overcalled.

After treating these light raises, in rather optimistic vein, stressing their game and even stem possibilities, I feel I ought to remind you again that you must pass if your partner's opening bid has been overcalled by the intervening opponent unless you have high cards as well as the distributional allures and trump support such as we have been considering. There is no need for a "chance-giving" raise. The opponent has given you a therefore definitely constructive and optimistic. It says that you do not require to wait for your partner's rebid in order to urge him to continue. As already stated, such raise indicates that you are nearly strong enough to have made a jump raise in case the opponent had passed. Use a little flexibility and imagination, but for general purposes this is not a bad yard stick with which to measure your call because if he bid no higher than another half trick, in my hand, I would have the material for a jump raise to three if there had been no overall. If the bidding went one heart by my partner, one spade on my right, I would need about the following hands in order to bid two hearts at this stage:

All NICE MEN Are MARRIED

By VIDA HURST

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO. SITTING in her room at the hotel with a bathrobe about her shoulders, Janice tried to see Nina's side of it. Because, of course, being Richard's wife, she must have a side. No marriage ever crashed without both of the persons involved being more or less to blame.

Staring through the open window upon the blank row of opposite windows, Janice saw a series of pictures which were painted entirely by her own fancy. It was like peering in upon the other couple's private life in a way but she felt she had to do it in order to understand what was wrong.

In the first place Richard must have been a good-looking man whom she had seen with him in the station. Janice pictured her younger, prettier, with her two small children. They had evidently been mere babies when she married Richard. Although he hadn't said exactly, he had implied that the situation had existed for several years.

Nina was unhappy and distressed. Perhaps Richard had been her lawyer after her husband died. Or when they were divorced. She was just that dissatisfied type to have been a divorcee.

In any case her appeal for Richard had undoubtedly been in his ability to face the world alone. Janice knew how easily his sympathies were roused. How tender his heart. He had married her to protect her and found himself involved in an emotional whirlwind which was Nina's perpetual atmosphere.

Nina was the constant heroine, in the spotlight all the time, an actress who lived her roles. Janice had seen her, her hair flowing, it was for her to attempt to draw these conclusions after having only seen the woman once.

She went on seeing Nina now as a little girl, long, black curly hair with pink hair ribbons, a wilful, impetuous child, set on having her own way regardless of consequences.

As a young girl she had been gay and popular. Boys were attracted by her imperious, high-handed methods, her flashing, changing moods, her redoubtable personality. Nina had never been one to look for masculine attention, but she had probably received the least eligible of all her suitors.

MARRIED against the advice of parents and friends. And after a tempestuous honeymoon awakened one fine day to the most fascinating of her roles, 'the unhappy wife.'

Later she had been the 'victim' of motherhood, one of those who acted as if no one else had ever brought a child into the world. Her nerves and high strung, hysterical reactions had driven her husband to the divorce court or an early death.

In any case Nina had been left the victim of fate this time, under which auspicious circumstances she met Richard. Just a little widow alone in the cruel world! Janice could imagine the instant attraction between them and the subsequent complete surrender of Richard Blake.

She could also imagine Nina's tantrums starting before they had been married a week, her jealousy of Richard's friends, her unceasing nagging until his nerves became repressed and taciturn.

Nina's demands would be endless, both for herself and her two children. Her taste in clothes was fastidious and only those with labels from the very best shops would be acceptable.

As business conditions became worse, Richard's nerves were strung to the breaking point. It was impossible to satisfy her expensive needs, and the less he could do so, the more frequent her outbursts until the situation had developed into a vicious circle.

Unquestionably Richard was to blame somewhere, decided Janice, remembering her intention to see both sides, but it had been impossible for her to find even an imaginary fault with him.

She saw him a gentle, gay soul becoming more and more disillusioned. Tired to death of their harsh and driven, often brutal. Who wouldn't be? The poor darling! she thought, defending him.

News for STAMP Collectors

TURKEY's latest issue, a charity set for child welfare, is nothing to get excited about, from the esthetic point of view. The design pictures two tiny, heavy babies holding a crescent in a red, in which appears a crescent.

The printing of the star is so imperfect that the two lower points seem to have been chopped off.

Austria, however, comes forward with a neatly designed and printed stamp to commemorate the international philatelic exhibition at Vienna. The design, showing a stage coach passing two foot travelers, was taken from a painting by Moritz von Schwid, a Vienna-born German artist. It is printed in blue.

The stamp was sold at double its face value, 50 groschen, plus the price of admission to the exhibition.

Official Airmail.

A special three-penny airmail stamp has been issued by the Great Western Railway of England, which operates an airmail service between Birmingham and Plymouth.

The issue is reported to have been sanctioned by the British postal authorities, but is not, of course, official.

Nazi Watermarks.

The Nazi swastika emblem will be used henceforth as the watermark on all German stamps, although existing postage marks, bearing a waffle-shaped mark, must first be used.

Canadian Overprint.

The Canadian Postoffice Department announces that in honor of the world's grain conference, to be held at Regina, Canada, this summer, it will overprint a quantity of the 20-cent red pictorial originally issued in December, 1930.

Philippine Airmail.

The first regular issue of air mail stamps has been made by the Philippines. All issues relate to this have been more or less intended as commemorative stamps, being issued for special flights. While the new series is not of a new design—the regular current stamping being used with an overprint—it is nevertheless the first regular air mail set.

With that clear perception which even now at the most emotional moments of her life did not desert her, Janice saw the danger ahead. Saw her presence complicating their domestic unhappiness, becoming a third aisle to the everlasting triangle.

How could this help the man she loved? Would it not increase rather than lessen his nervous tension, add new wrinkles between his tired eyes and deepen the furrows about his mouth?

Also, no matter how justified Janice might feel in her own mind, what would be said and thought by her parents back in Craig, Mo.?

The best protected of illicit love affairs was apt to break into print. What would they say? Their daughter involved in a public scandal? Not a good "co-respondent."

Janice knew the cruelty of small town gossips. How could everyone would be buzzing about it but never mention it to her father or mother? She could picture them going bravely about their business saying nothing but out to the heart, waiting until the children were all in bed and the house quiet before they dared mention it even to each other.

"What could have made her do such a thing?" they would say. Then one of them would say, "It must be our fault."

Of all the pictures her overstimulated imagination had drawn it was this one, conjured up from some forgotten incident of her childhood, which forced her decision.

The dismay and pain of those whose every thought for years had been the protection and good of their children; who had warned her over and over again with the dimmest notion of the country breed the desire to leave the city; who, believing with simple faith in God, given sanctity of marriage, would never recognize him as Richard's wife even though they should be legally married.

"I can't do it," Janice decided soberly. "No matter how much he needs me."

And because she could not bear to discuss it with him, she made up her mind to return to Kansas City immediately.

Ham Mousse

One tablespoon granulated gelatin

One-third cup cold water

One cup salad dressing

Two cups chopped cooked ham

One-half cup chopped celery

One-fourth cup chopped green peppers

One-half teaspoon salt

One-half teaspoon paprika

One-half cup white wine

Sugar, gelatin in cold water five minutes. Dissolve over hot water. Cool. Add rest of ingredients, pour into glass mold. Chill until stiff. Unmold on crisp lettuce leaves.

A Preserving Tip:

To keep preserves from spoiling, after filling the jars and allowing them to become cool, try covering with olive oil. Nor need you be afraid that the oil will permeate the jelly, for oil and sweet water, which is the basis of a jelly, will not mix. Then cover your jars with ordinary covers and you can use at any time.

HOLLYWOOD, July 17. GETTING back into the movies hasn't been as simple for Ann Dvorak as it appears on the surface. She and her bridegroom, Leslie Fenton, have been back in town for over three months, and so far she hasn't appeared in one scene on the Warner Brothers' lot. She is booked now for two pictures, but she has been delayed, and now she is not even in the repair department.

Embroidered organdy flowers in pastel shades are being almost given away. But the investment in a few even at this midsummer date will add a fresh touch to a costume. You can get white or pastel colored flowers, the pastels including that delicious shade of peach.

UNFORTUNATE that Martha Sleeper could not be seen in the stage performance of "Dinner at Eight" in town other than Los Angeles and San Francisco. She surprised her friends with the excellence of her performance as the ditzy blonde who is both the mother and her first role in "Pent House." Miss Sleeper is under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and the plan now is to give her better roles and better opportunities. Perhaps after all, it's not such a bad idea for these girls to get themselves a little stage experience.

YOUNG man of more than ordinary interest, has come to Hollywood to try to crash the gates. His name is Eric Clegg, and his mother is Blanche Bates, famous stage actress while his father is George Creel, internationally known as a writer and diplomat. Young Creel is only 18 years old, and he has his mother's beautiful eyes. His sister prefers the stage to the screen, and is now in Germany studying stage technique. According to young Creel his mother believes the German training is the best in the world. Young Creel had a test made at radio, but so far there is no report on the outcome.

LATVIA—Stamps for the Latvia-Africa flight were issued, but that only 50 or 100 sets were sold at that time. The price of the 10 cent stamp is 40 cents, but that did not deter the dealers from asking $5 a set. Incidentally the plane was flown from Riga as planned, but was forced down near Berlin and destroyed so the aviators had to return by rail.

NICARAGUA—Type A24, 1c on 3c light blue of the issue of 1929, was surcharged in three lines, "Reello 1933 Vale un Centavo." There is also a minor variety which contains an "S" in the word "Centavo" in place of the "T."

PANAMA—The 3c value of the 1921 Century of Independence issue was overprinted "Habilitado" in black.

PORTUGAL—Two more values of the Lusiads were made available for collectors. The 10 cent and 20 cent values have made their appearance, 30c dark blue and 90c carmine rose.

TURKEY—Two issues of semi-postal stamps have been released here recently. Both designs are upright oblongs. The Angora issue consists of two values, 20pa, violet gray and red, and 15ku green. The Smyrna issue is said to be scarce and likewise consists of two values, 1ku violet and red, and 5ku brown and red.

VENEZUELA—The 10c deep purple air mail stamp has appeared on safety paper.

Of the new Air Mail series, the 5c, 10c, 15c, 25c, 40c, 75c, 1B, 120B, 170B, 190B, 210B, 250B, 3,70B, 10B and 20B have been performed "G.N." for official use.

No Dessert. When having hot biscuits or muffins for dinner, serve a favorite conserve or preserve along with an extra pan of hot biscuits and there is no necessity or desire for any other dessert.

In the fight over one man's supply of gold between the two men at the foot of the golden mountain, first one and then the other would be apparently winning. They had exchanged the gold so often in the course of a long time that both of them had forgotten who originally had it. They had both become exhausted frequently and rested, giving hundred to each other over the pile of gold one of them had dug up which lay between them. This battle began thousands of years ago, my friends, and continues, for we are all in the presence of more than we need, put here by a generous host. We are all of us the man who wants what belongs to another instead of locating and earning our share. We fight for what is already dug, instead of digging more.

Your Year Ahead.

Looks promising for new and romantic contacts for those who celebrate this as their natal day: the year ahead also offers shifts in your home life, your occupation and your finances, all of which are to be welcomed if they stand the strain of careful investigation. Let's EXPLORE Your MIND

By ALBERT EDWARD WIGGAM, D. Sc.
See Whether His Opinions Agree With Your Own

HAS THE INSTITUTION OF MARRIAGE PRODUCED THE FAMILY RATHER THAN THE FAMILY PRODUCED MARRIAGE?

YES OR NO.

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These answers are given from the scientific point of view. Science puts the rights of society above the rights of individuals.

—No. In the opinion of competent students the family came first, because after self-preservation, the first duty was to the child. However, this once forced the mother to care for the child over a long period. During this period she could not obtain food for herself and child. Hence the man was forced to continue his partnership whether he wished it or not. In this the family gradually forced upon primitive tribes the obvious necessity of setting up the institution of marriage to all and sundry that this woman and child belonged to a particular man and that he was responsible for their food and shelter.

—If it were we would all be in jail. Most people act this way by gradually learning to control our own impulses and to choose right courses of action. We often have a very powerful, almost uncontrollable desire to do something wrong. The test of character is not to do it. We thus set up three habits of success: First, the habit of overcoming temptation; second, the habit of right choosing; third, if we carry the right choice into action we develop the habit of successful doing and, as Prof. John Dewey says: "We learn to do by doing."

—It does if you do anything beyond the bounds of propriety. Morons can learn to move around a ballroom gracefully, but anything individual that interprets the music requires genuine creative imagination. The Greeks placed dancing high among the fine arts. All primitive people have dances, mostly religious or warlike, but they are quite simple compared to the higher creative forms of advanced races. You can not do anything individual and creative without a fair supply of brains.

American Round-the-World Flyer Passes Over Nome 16 Hours, 30 Minutes After Leaving Khabarovsk, Siberia; Does Not Stop.

INTENDED TO GO ON TO FAIRBANKS

Bad Weather All Along His Course, but He Is Now Well Ahead of Time Record He Set With Harold Gatty in 1931.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 20.—Wiley Post, round-the-world flyer, passed over Nome, Alaska, at 7:30 a.m. (12:30 p.m. St. Louis time), the U. S. Army Signal Corps was advised by its station there.

Post's plans called for a landing at Fairbanks, 500 miles east of Nome, where preparations have been made for refueling his plane for his next flight to Edmonton, Alberta.

Post was about 16 hours, 30 minutes on his way from Khabarovsk, Siberia.

The weather bureau reported the sky in Nome was overcast earlier in the day and that rain was falling in most of interior Alaska.

Two years ago Post and Harold Gatty, his navigator, flew from Khabarovsk to Solomon Beach, near Nome, in 18 hours. They refused on the beach and continued their flight to Fairbanks.

Directional signals had been transmitted by Western Alaska stations of the Signal Corps during the night to guide Post through the murky sky.

At Nome, Post had increased his margin over the Post-Gatty record by 13 minutes, making his lead 30 hours, 29 minutes. Post's elapsed time since he took off from New York was 130 hours, 20 minutes.

Post and Gatty had used up 160 hours, 49 minutes when they reached Solomon, near Nome.

Thirty Hours Ahead of Record When He Left Khabarovsk.

MOSCOW, July 20.—Thirty hours, 16 minutes ahead of the record he hopes to beat, Wiley Post, American round-the-world flyer, took off from Khabarovsk, in Eastern Siberia, across Bering Sea, the northern end of the Pacific Ocean, for Alaska at 3:58 a. m. today.

He arrived at Khabarovsk at 3:45 p. m. from Rukhlovo, 700 miles west of Irkutsk, 100 miles from the border with Mongolia.

Values for the afternoon were the after-fight morning.
